

CLUB ETHOS

'Rugby for all'

Rugby has been said to be the ultimate team game – it can be fast, fluid and physically hard.

It tests and hopefully advances the personal attributes of all involved – continually.

At Eastleigh RFC we measure success by the personal improvement of the individual and collectively, the squad and the Club. Winning is a hopeful consequence but not everything.

The relationship between everyone involved in Eastleigh RFC is critical to the clubs well being.

RESPECT for oneself and each other is central to the ethos of Eastleigh RFC.

The club is proud of this approach and is determined to uphold this.

In particular, the player's code is based on RESPECT for their fellow players, coach's, referees and opponents. In return, they should expect respect for their personal efforts and achievements.

If individuals cannot show this respect then their involvement in the club should be questioned.
